In the whispered stories of the deep Canadian woods there is an old, old Indian legend, so often proven true its warning is apprehended with dread. The legend is that whenever in Indian summer the wolves form in pack and howl as their custom is in midwinter--it portends the death of a human. This is deftly touched on with a mastery artistry earlier in the play of "The Wolf," Eugene Walter's interesting and absorbing story of the Canadian fur country, and is exemplified in a strikingly original and telling effect in the last act. An unusually fine equipment of scenery shows pictures of autumn in the far North. "The Wolf" company play an engagement here next Friday evening, October 23. A cast of notable players includes Mr. Severin DeDevin, Miss Isabelle Estelle, and the Messrs. Henry Duggan, Geo. Nichols, Frank Dee and J. T. Chaillee.
